

Wellington Mathabela he up holds an achievement of more than 20 years within the Hair and Beauty Industry Wellington Mathabela is a driven, dedicated, enthusiastic, demanding, attentive to detail and “an all-rounder” hair stylist who specializes in cutting, styling and colouring hair. He has mastered the viral trend of creating customized handmade wigs and says “well self-taught”. He aspires to take the leap of faith to create his very own brand “Vushlywave”.

He attended several training academies in South Africa and has successfully completed over fifty cutting and colouring courses all in the name of getting “better than better”. He has in turn trained over a hundred stylists. In 2013, he took up a chance to grow, joined the L’Oréal Professional African Institute of South Africa of which most of his well-polished and consistent skills were refined. This has enhanced his South African and International career.

Also, in the same year did the Essie Nail Programme at Placécol by Beverly Hills. Between 2013 to 2017, he has styled the South African L’Oréal models for two years in a row at the South African Fashion Week themed “Heritage” featuring Bernie Ottjes, supported by Terrence Janse Van Rensburg and Chance Meaken. He was also involved in the South African Bridal Fashion Show. In 2015 L’Oréal certified Wellington as a Professional Hair Stylist under their supervision of the brand making him the youngest in this category. He has also been trained by Bernie Ottjes. With many of his highlights, he featured in the Drum Magazine and True Love 2014 as an adviser on Mizani Products and day care of Caucasian and Ethnic hair. He was featured with Marie Claire, Destiny and Imagine Magazine.

Yanga Magazine did a special interview with him in 2020, showcasing his life story and so far achievements emphasizing that he changed the native with his magic (<https://online.fliphtml5.com/abqaj/rwmh/>). Whether it be on Films or TV sets such as the SABC Production set or, with renowned Chef Nti or, in fashion editorials as part of Mzansi Sexiest Calendar or the Magazine already mentioned, Wellington has vast experience in South Africa’s entertainment industry. Has also worked with bridal parties at weddings offering hair and beauty services as well as toddler parties.

He is extremely involved in the breast cancer cause, “Pink October”, because he feels very close to women in general. He has taken part in breast cancer campaigns in South Africa, including in magazines such as Elle, and has taken part in marches dressed in pink to emphasise that it is an issue that should be faced without taboos and without shame.

He plans to build a business of 2300 square metres where he would place hairdressers and beauticians and then invite women to enjoy them in their daily lives. He is in Mozambique to change the narrative and open minds to the different possibilities available to young talent through education and intellectual curiosity. He is now branching into Mozambican entertainment, doing collaborative work with Magazines such as YANGA. A true inspiration to both man and woman in the art of hairdressing, the interpretation of personal style and sirens in beautifying studio and television shoots around the globe. For Wellington “beauty is how you express it. It’s how you present it and feel comfortable with it”.

Now after he has been out the country for 6 years he came back with a lot of techniques and knowledge and skills to transform the up growing industry in south african market. he says fainaly the future is looking to be brighter after getting an incredible opportunity to join the Aspire Day Spa in the heart of south africa, Johannesburg, Sandton with the prestige of luxury Hotel Sky that holds the hub of locally and international clientele. Where i stand as a professional certified hair stylist if i would be given a chance to collaborate with the Hotel Sky to service their staff and taking care of their guest or residents clients it will be a dream come true because “BELEZA EU MUNDO “ that simply means i pride myself making sure that i build confidence individually for any client i serve. “LET ME CROWN YOU “

Thank you
